What is a Community Plan?

A community plan is a blueprint to help neighborhoods go from today's reality towards future goals. Ideas are gathered from all community partners—residents, churches, businesses, schools, developers, investors, neighborhood associations, nonprofits and other groups—to:

- Identify problems to address as well as strengths to be improved,
- Define goals, and

- Develop strategies to reach the goals.

A community plan is created through a series of public meetings held over several months. These meetings give everyone an opportunity to be heard.

Community plans are comprehensive, addressing housing, transportation, economic development, community facilities and land use.

The Land Use meeting scheduled for February

6 will establish the community's preferred land use.

All community partners work together to draft the plan. Once complete, the plan will be presented to the Planning Commission and City Council for approval.

After approval, the plan is used as a guide for city decision making. Adopted plans do not include a specific financial commitment.
